5. During the period of time between January, 2013, and the filing of Plaintiffs' Motion, A.L. paid off the channels' debts and grew the YouTube Channel VideoGames ("VideoGames") from approximately 191,000 subscribers to 1.24 million subscribers today. For these statistics, I rely on a website called www.socialblade.com that shows all the subscribers and video views over time for YouTube channels. This website is relied upon by third party advertisers including the third party with whom A.L. has contracted to provide revenue from VideoGames. The statistics provided there show:

As of 1/29/2013:

Subscribers = 191,430

Total Video Views = 23.02 million

As of 12/1/2013:

Subscribers = 1.24 million

Total Video Views = 183.64 million

According to Socialblade, in November 2013 alone the number of subscribers increased 10.9%.

6. A.L., with me acting as his guardian and co-signer, entered into a revenue-generating "Content Provider Agreement" with a third party for VideoGames. If A.L. were to be deprived of access or control of VideoGames, then the contract could be declared null and void and the third party would have the right to remove their web-based advertisements and stop calculating or generating revenue.

7. I have read in Plaintiffs' Motion that Plaintiffs are seeking to deprive A.L. of access to VideoGames "in order to ensure that asset is not forever wasted, converted, destroyed[,] or otherwise liquidated or assigned to a third-party." Pls' Mem. at 7. To the best of my knowledge, there is no need to do so. Neither A.L. nor myself or my husband have any intention to waste, convert, destroy, liquidate, or assign any interest in VideoGames.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct. Executed in Montpelier, Virginia, this 10 of December, 2013.
